FOLLOWING six months of trading, Wave Air Conditioning is now seen as a new force in the industry. The company has a strong product portfolio and can offer extensive product experience and technical knowledge on all the ranges.

A new sister company has been introduced into the group under the name Wave Heat Recovery. Run by technical sales director Chris Singer and contracts director Mark Lister, Wave Heat Recovery is the exclusive UK distributor of the Canadian Lifebreath heat recovery equipment, which has been introduced to meet the requirements of the new building regulations.

In the medium term, Wave Air Conditioning is aiming to grow all of its brands, build business for the winter period and get ready for next summer.

It is also the intention to turn the Birmingham branch from just a suite of offices into a fully operational branch with a trade counter.

In the longer term, it is the company's aim to open a branch in the north of the country.
